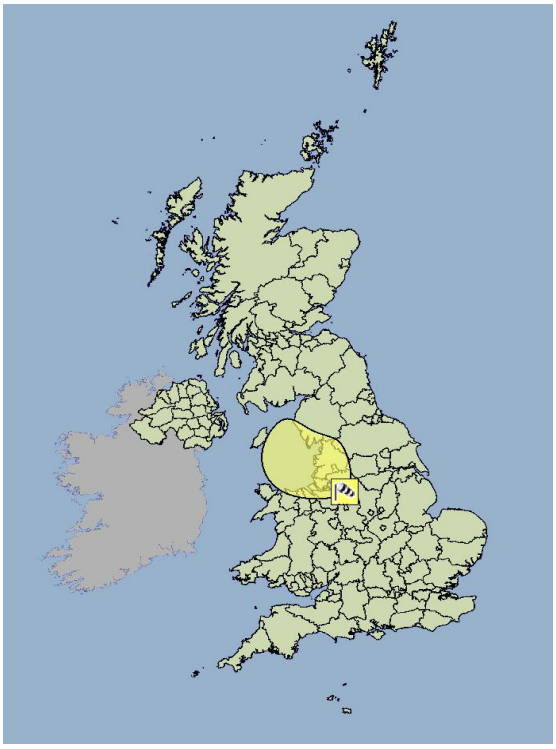
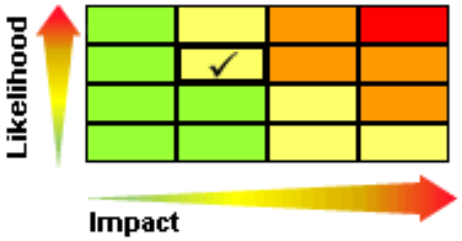
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A further area of strong winds is expected to affect Liverpool Bay and surrounding areas overnight along with further showers. The winds and showers are expected to gradually ease from early Wednesday morning.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Wind

Valid from 21:55 on Tue, 06th Jun 2017 until 06:00 on Wed, 07th Jun 2017

Strong to gale force west to northwesterly winds will continue to affect parts of north Wales and northwest England overnight into Wednesday. Gusts of 45 to 55 mph are likely, mainly in coastal districts and over hills.

Expect some localised transport disruption with some trees perhaps uprooted. Large waves and spray will affect some coasts.

This is an update to the warning to shrink the area to parts of north Wales and northwest England but extend the end time until 0600 Wednesday morning.
